Catches Up With John

RR: Hey, how's my big boy today?

John: I'm okay, I like this new room I'm in. I love the big window where I can see everyone who comes into the building. My old room had a big window too, but not as many people walked by and the dogs barked a lot going to the play yard.

RR: So, you're a people watcher?

John: I guess you could say that. I think "people lover" would be more accurate. I love greeting everyone who comes to my room and I'm especially happy when they sit with me, pet me, brush me, or whatever! I don't mind a nice lap either.

RR: I see you have some roommates. Are you cool with them?

John: Sure, I'm pretty easy going. In my other room, there were some more lively cats and honestly, I was a little jealous of the attention they got. My current roommates are shy and they might like a little petting, but not as much as my former roommates so I get a little more cuddling in here.

RR: Sounds like you're more than okay with that! How would you feel about going home with a person? I know a few people have been asking about you and if they come in and you charm them like you do me, they will probably take you home.

John: That would be really nice!

RR: I would miss you.

John: I would miss you too! 🐱
